Excerpt: . . . cold herself, Mademoiselle de Verneuil recollected the poor soldier behind the carriage, and insisted, against his remonstrances, in taking him into the carriage beside Francine. The sight of Fougères drew her for a time out of her reflections. The sentinels stationed at the Porte Saint-Lonard refused to allow ingress to the strangers, and she was therefore obliged to exhibit the ministerial order. This at once gave her safety in entering the town, but the postilion could find no other place for her to stop at than the Poste inn. Madame, said the Blue whose life she had saved. If you ever want a sabre to deal some special blow, my life is yours. I am good for that. My name is Jean Falcon, otherwise called Beau-Pied, sergeant of the first company of Hulots veterans, seventy-second half-brigade, nicknamed Les Mayeneais. Excuse my vanity; I can only offer you the soul of a sergeant, but that s at your service. He turned on his heel and walked off whistling. The lower one goes in social life, said Marie, bitterly, the more we find generous feelings without display. A marquis returns me death for life, and a poor sergeant--but enough of that. When the weary woman was at last in a warm bed, her faithful Francine waited in vain for the affectionate good-night to which she was accustomed; but her mistress, seeing her still standing and evidently uneasy, made her a sign of distress. This is called...
