God often doth more than he hath said, never less; he often shoots beyond the mark of the promise he hath set, never short of it. He is abundant in truth. God may sometimes delay a promise, he will not deny it. The promise may lie a long time as seed hid under ground; but it is all the while ripening. The promise of I srael s deliverance lay four hundred and thirty years hid under ground; but when the time was come, the promise did not go a day beyond its reckoning, Exod. xii. 41. The strength of Israel will not lie, 1 Sam. xv. 29. Meditate on the truth of God. The meditation of God s truth would, l. Be a pillar of support for faith. The world hangs upon God s power, and faith hangs upon his truth. 2. The meditation of God s truth would make us ambitious to imitate him. We should be true in our words, true in our dealings. Pythagoras being asked, What did make men like God? answered, When they speak trut. Second. Meditate upon the promises of God. The promises are flowers growing Ill the paradise of scripture; meditation, like the bee, sucks out the sweetness of them. The promises are of no use or comfort to us, till they are meditated upon. For as the roses hanging in the garden may give a fragrant perfume, yet their sweet water...
