Excerpt: .great friends, too--grew up together, and all that, you know. Well, one day early this summer they took a trip out to Long Branch, and they were just charmed with the place. There happened to be a most desirable cottage to rent, and as their families were small and the cottage rather large they concluded that the very thing to do was to take it together. People hinted to them that it wouldn't do, they'd quarrel before the season was over--but they laughed the suggestion to scorn. To think that they, who knew one another so well and agreed in so many of their ideas and tastes, would not get on well together for a few short months! The idea was really too comical. So they took the cottage. And this is the natural result? Wait till I tell you about it; it really is funny, said my friend, who doesn't like to have her stories shortened. They had very business-like arrangements. One would take her cook, the other a nurse--the housekeeping expenses would be shared equally. Part of the furnishings would be taken out by one family and part by the other. They would have a pony carriage and the use of a cow. The husbands could come into town together every morning and out again at night, and everything would be lovely. And when they had been out there a few weeks, continued I, as Mary paused to take...
